‘Zusammenleben in Deutschland – Living Together in Germany’ scientific study

Dear Sir or Madam,

We are inviting you to take part in the ‘Zusammenleben in Deutschland – Living Together in Germany’ study. It is being conducted by infas and the German Institute for Economic Research DIW Berlin in cooperation with the University of Bremen. We are interested in the way people live together in German society. For this reason, we would like to hear the views of all the people in Germany, regardless of their circumstances. Your participation is voluntary.

One member of your household has already answered the questionnaire and named you as another person over the age of 18. We therefore would like to invite you to take part in this important study. As a small thank you, you will receive 10 euros after taking part in the survey.

Bear in mind that we will only gain an accurate picture of how people live together in Germany if as many people as possible take part. More information is provided on page 2 and in the ‘Declaration on strict confidentiality of your information’.

We have sent you this letter in German. The access information for your online survey can be found in the German version of the letter. The German version of the letter contains the website and the access code for the online survey. You can access the survey directly by using the QR code printed on the right side of the letter. The paper survey is only available in German. We kindly ask you to complete the survey within 2 weeks of receiving the German invitation letter.

Take part and share your thoughts! We thank you for your participation.

Yours sincerely

Prof. Dr. Stefan Liebig
Scientific Member of the
